Overview

As the reach of the internet keeps growing and its omnipresence in our personal, political, and commercial worlds becomes thoroughly cemented, both the business and legal communities will be presented with immense challenges as well as great opportunities. Similar occasions for either advancement or failure have emerged in these arenas since the dawn of the Internet age, with the result that many successful business and legal professionals have adapted while others struggle to keep apace. The Idaho Law Review's 2009 Symposium will be an opportunity for scholars and professionals from the business, technological, and legal communities to come together and share their experience, and educate one another about ways they have successfully adapted as their fields have confronted the array of challenges and opportunities presented by the world wide web.

The 2009 Idaho Law Review Symposium will continue the tradition of bringing together a select group of scholars and professionals for an informed interdisciplinary discussion centered on a topic of growing national importance. By exposing members of the academic, business, technological, and legal communities to diverse viewpoints and multifaceted experiences, our goal is to provide a forum for open discourse that will provide participants with valuable information applicable in their professional settings.
